

Question for the Record
Rep. W. Gregory Steube (FL-17)
House Judiciary Committee
Subcommittee Committee Hearing: Online Platforms and Market Power
Part 2: Innovation and Entrepreneurship

1. Mr. Andeer, as I understand it Apple charges apps that provide digital content 30% with each transaction. If the app has to pass that cost onto consumers, are they able to tell consumers they can receive that service elsewhere like going to their website?
2. As you explained to that 30% tax becomes 15% in the second year of the subscription, is the app able to tell consumers of the lower fees in the second year within their app? Can they explain that the app service could be cheaper elsewhere outside of the app?